SYRACUSE NATIONALS

The Nats, boasting the world's most unique major league ownership, are controlled by 150 basketball fans in Central New York. No single person may own more than ten (10) shares of stock in Central New York Basketball Inc., thereby encouraging widespread ownership and support. One share of stock is owned by over 3,200 people---members of the Carrier Recreation Club, Inc. The fighting, hustling, "never-say-die" spirit of this team so captivated the respect and enthusiasm of Central New Yorkers that at the conclusion of the 1953-54 season the fans purchased the Nationals for $200,000.00 and assured the continuance of the National Basketball Association franchise in Syracuse.

Perhaps the most colorful cage story---both player and coach---is "sandwiched" in between "the Digger" Al Cervi's records.

"The greatest professional competition of all time," is the most descriptive story that could be written on the Nats' veteran mentor.

A great scorer - a defensive giant - and, now, an outstanding strategian of the pro-court game, Al Cervi is and has been one of basketball's outstanding contributors from high school in his native Buffalo, N.Y., to the Buffalo Downtown YMCA, to independent squads in Auburn, Syracuse, and Newark (N.Y.), to Les Harrison's Rochester Ebers, Rochester Seagrams, and Rochester Royals, to the Nats.

A respected Syracuse business-man, as well as a community leader, Al now makes his home in the Eastwood area with his beautiful wife Ruth and three children.

CONLIN, ED 22 6'5" 200 Brooklyn, N.Y. Fordham U.

The lone rookie joining the Syracuse roster this season is All-American Ed Conlin from Fordham University, the "all-metropolitan New York everything." His performance during the early League season has more than justified the many honors he received as a collegian.

A native of Brooklyn, the 6-5 rookie holds every individual record in Fordham basketball history. He tallied 1886 points in varsity competition and his 1930 rebounds during that same period captured a new high mark for the Rams under the boards. His 1952-53 rebounding mark of 612, for an average of 23.5 per game, led the entire nation in board play.

In addition to his many All-American honors, Conlin was named to the East All-Star squad, playing with the College All-Stars on the Globetrotter tour, and for two successive years captured the most highly sought award in the metropolitan area, the Haggerty Award, emblematic of New York's outstanding cager.

Conlin's contract with the Nats calls for his playing 60 games of their schedule since he is currently attending Syracuse University Law School. He holds a reserve commission in the armed forces and has received orders for active duty which call him to report two years hence.

Ed made his Syracuse playing debut this year competing against the Nats as a member of the College All-Stars. He showed the fine hands, the playmaking ability, the shots, the rebounding, and the poise that had earned such wide acclaim. Maurice Stokes, the Rochester Royals outstanding rookie, won the Most Valuable Player award that night, but it was not a unanimous vote. Conlin also was named on some of the ballots, the only other All-Star to be nominated.

Coach Al Cervi has named Ed a strong contender for rookie-of-the-year honors.

Indiana's Dick Farley came to the Nats as a rookie last year, and had a storybook opportunity to start his pro career. He came into his own as a replacement for Bill Gabor, one of the Nats regular backcourt men, who was lost for the season with hepatitis after only four games.

Called upon for regular duty, "Fearless" Farley proved himself deserving of the All-American honors he had received at the Hoosier school. He played 1113 minutes in 69 games and scored 408 points. His total point production averaged 5.9 per game on a 38.5% shooting average, second highest on the squad.

A comparatively unknown collegian, Dick caught the eye of the Syracuse brass during the college East-West game in Madison Square Garden when he tallied in double figures and showed a versatile style of play.

Much of Dick's value to the Nats is his spark and spirit, a real "Cervi-type" ball player. With his tremendous one-hand push shot and a fine driving layup, Farley undoubtedly will develop into one of the NBA's top little men. His career will be delayed temporarily, however, for military service beginning next spring.

A native of Winslow, Ind., Dick stands 6-4 and weighs 190 lbs. He and his wife, Marge, acquired a brand new 7 lb. 11 oz. son named Stephen on Thanksgiving Day.

Despite his two years of pro experience, Billy "The Kid" Kenville is still "The Rook" to his teammates, but in name only. He is an important cog in what Coach Al Cervi calls the finest backcourt he has seen in pro basketball.

A fine college player at St. Bonaventure, Bill impressed the experts throughout the league during the past two seasons by his ability and spirit, and he is expected to play an increasingly bigger role in the Syracuse scheme of things.

As a freshman, "Kenny" proved a fine clutch player for the Nats, especially in the playoffs that season when he scored 116 points in 13 games for a fine 8.9 average. A member of the NBA All-Rookie team, he had the best shooting percentage on the club, an accurate 38.4 mark.

In his second year, he increased his scoring total by 65 points over 70 games and upped his average from 6.0 per game to 7.1. Among the little men of the Nats, he was second only to Paul Seymour in rebounds with 150, labeling him the "tallest 6-2" in the NBA.

Twenty-four years of age, Billy is 6-2 and weighs 185 lbs. A native of Elmhurst, N.Y., he now resides in Syracuse with his charming wife, the former Violet Miller of Binghamton, and son Billy, Jr. Their second offspring is expected early in 1956.

Big Johnny Kerr was Syracuse's No. 1 draft choice last season, and his tremendous performance more than justified his near-unanimous All-American selection at Illinois.

In his freshman pro year, the giant redhead played an average of 21.2 minutes per game in 72 contests and averaged 10.5 each outing--fourth highest on the squad. His 301 field goals in 718 attempts gave him a shooting percentage of 41.9%, to lead all Nats in that department.

The "most valuable player" in the Big Ten as a college senior, Johnny broke all standing Illini scoring records. He competed in the All-Star game as a senior and made the tour with the College All-Stars at the outset of last season.

Twenty-four years of age, Kerr measures 6-9. His weight officially is 230, but last season he reported in at 240 and finished at 210. This season he started light and team medics are attempting to put some of the avoirdupois back.

In the off-season, John and his wife Betty live in their native Chicago. An extraordinary wit and good humor man, Big Red also holds the dubious distinction of being the team comic off the court.

54-55	Syracuse	67	605	228	229	140	331	148	596

Syracuse's most popular player last season, George King is now in his fifth year as a pro. Teamed with Co-Captain Paul Seymour, he is 50% of the best backcourt in the NBA.

All-time scoring record holder from Morris-Harvey College, George came to the Nats after a season with the Phillips Oilers. His outstanding abilities are as a ball handler and playmaker, but he also has a fine jumping push shot and a layup that is hard to stop.

Although he is only 6'0" tall, the handsome West Virginia native has unusual spring in his legs. Last season he played 2015 minutes for the Nats in 67 games and had the fourth highest shooting percentage on the squad with 37.7%. His total point production was 596 for a 8.9 average.

In the assists department, he ranked second only to Paul Seymour among the Syracusans.

During the past couple seasons, George has been having trouble with his free throws, but during the championship playoffs last year he scored one charity toss that won the series for the Nats. With the score tied and 12 seconds to go, George was fouled as the Pistons fought for possession of the ball. While the fans held their breath, he dunked the shot, and then glossed his performance by helping to steal the ball on the next downcourt play, giving Syracuse the victory.

George operates a sporting goods store in his native Charleston during the off-season. He and his lovely wife, Jeanne, have three children, Georgie, Kristy, and Kathy.

LLOYD, EARL 27 6'6" 220 Washington, D.C. West Va. State

After the Nats secured Earl Lloyd's contract from the Washington Capitols when that club disbanded during the 1950-51 season, they had to wait a couple of years while he worked for Uncle Sam, but it was a worthwhile wait. "Squirrely" has proved one of the most valuable acquisitions to the club in recent years.

Standing 6-6, and with an extraordinary spring in his legs, Earl is a tower of strength under the boards. He has snagged more than 500 rebounds during each of the past two seasons and ranks second only to Dolph Schayes on the Nats squad in that department.

In addition to his fine board play, "Early" has also been improving steadily as a scorer. Last year he averaged 10.2 points per game on a field goal percentage of 36.5%. At the foul line he sank an even 75%, 159 shots out of a possible 212.

Earl leads the Nats in one department, and it's a record he's not happy about. He topped the squad in personal fouls last season, being called 283 times in 2212 minutes of play. That's one foul to about every eight minutes of action. However, that wasn't quite so outstanding as his record the previous season when he led the league in personals, being credited with 303.

Popular in the Syracuse community, Lloyd was saluted by his many fans on "Earl Lloyd Night" during 1953-54, only his second season with the Nats.

A native of Washington, D.C., "The Cat" is 27 years old and played his college ball at West Virginia State.

The man who couldn't get away from basketball even though he tried, Red Rocha, is in his eighth campaign among the "pay-for-play" athletes.

Red retired at the end of the 52-53 season, but found that he had liked the pro game too much, and returned last year to register one of his best campaigns.

An All-American at Oregon State University, Ephraim started his pro career with the St. Louis Bombers, went to Baltimore, and then to Syracuse in the 1951-52 season.

Noted throughout the League as the top defensive big man in basketball, spindly 6'9" Red also rates as a real threat offensively. Last season he averaged 11.3 points per game, third among the Syracuse squad, and earned a solid 36.8% field goal average.

He ranked third on the squad in rebounds, behind Dolph Schayes and Earl Lloyd.

A native-born Hawaiian, Rocha was a civilian employee of the Navy Department on the West Coast during the war, and during his few odd moments of relaxation developed the ability that has made him an NBA standout.

The "Splendid Splinter" is now a Syracuse resident. He and his wife Kay and their three daughters, Kay, Terry, and Cheryl Lyn recently moved into a new home in a nearby suburb.

Co-Captain Dolph Schayes, playing his eighth pro season for the Nats, has led the club in scoring and rebounds in each campaign, and with many fans, "As Schayes goes, so go the Nats" is an unalterable truth.

A native New Yorker and graduate of NYU, where he played under Coach Howard Cann, Dolph came to Syracuse with the distinction of having won the Haggerty Award, the Metropolitan area's top collegiate honor.

Schayes is one of the most versatile and prolific scorers in basketball today. In addition to a beautiful outside two-handed shot, he can throw with either hand and drive with equal ease.

He holds the Onondaga County War Memorial record for the most points scored in any one game, 41, the most rebounds in any one game, 26, and the most free throws in any one game, 23. Each year his scoring average, his charity toss record, and his rebounding are among the best in the league.

"Rookie-of-the-Year" in his freshman season, Dolph has been on the All-Star squads since the classic's inception. In 1949-50 and 1950-51 he was named to the All-League second team; since that time he has been a first team choice.

A tall 6-8 and weighing 220 lbs., Dolph is a big man with the speed and grace of a backcourt performer.

Since playing with the Nats he has made his home in Syracuse with his striking brunette wife, Naomi, a former Syracuse U. coed, and their 2 daughters.

At 27 years of age, Paul Seymour is the old man of the Nats squad. That's speaking in point of service, since durable Paul is starting his ninth season at Syracuse and tenth pro campaign.

The wheelhorse of Coach Al Cervi's teams since he joined the squad in the 1947-48 season, Paul came to Syracuse after service with the Toledo Jeeps, New Orleans, and Baltimore in the pro cage game.

Always a reliable backcourt man and defensive specialist, he has developed in the past few seasons into a leading scorer as well. His 1050 point total last year, the highest in his career, and his 14.6 per game average placed him second for team honors behind Dolph Schayes.

Co-Captain of the Nats squad, Paul was named to the NBA Eastern All-Star team for the past three years and was also a second-team selection on the circuit's All-League squad for the 1953-54 and 1954-55 seasons.

Nicknamed "The Iron Man" in recognition of his grueling service, Seymour has averaged more than 40 minutes of play per game during the last three years. He has ranked high in the important "assists" column during that period also. In 1952-53 he was fifth in the league, in 1953-54 third, and in 1954-55 fourth.

Standing 6-2 and weighing 180 lbs., Paulie is a native of Toledo, but now makes his home in Syracuse. He and his wife, Doris, and their two children recently moved into a new home near Liverpool, a Syracuse suburb.

A late-season arrival who took up the slack when the Nats ran out of manpower, Jim Tucker has earned himself a full-time berth with the world champion Syracuse club.

When the Nats' Wally Osterkorn had to submit to surgery for a leg injury, Bill Gabor was lost for the season with hepatitis, and Connie Simmons retired temporarily from the sport because of back difficulties, Slim Jim agreed to part-time service. He was then a student in Pittsburgh and commuted many times to take part in the Nats' busy schedule.

In spite of the fact that he did not practice nor play regularly with his teammates, Jim came through with some fine clutch performances that helped the Nats take the Eastern title and the championship.

He averaged 5.3 points per game in approximately 14 minutes of play in each of 20 contests, and snared a total of 50 rebounds.

Coach Al Cervi looks for a much more impressive record this year from the speedy Duquesne graduate, who has both a fine outside shot and a ready hand around the hoop.

Jim's greatest publicity of the season was received not on the sports pages, but on the news pages when he rescued a small child during the fire in his apartment building.

A native of Paris, Ky., Jim was married last June to a lovely native of Pittsburgh, Pa.
